January 2013

The final elements of the Strategic Planning process were presented to the Board of Aldermen on November 13, 2012. Members of the Strategic Plan Steering Committee Steve Lichtenfeld, John Lee and Dr. Sharmon Wilkinson introduced the new Vision Statement and four Key Performance Areas (KPA).

These elements are the result of a process that began in March 2012 and dubbed C the Future. The Novak Consulting Group, who facilitated the Strategic Planning process, conducted focus groups and meetings with the Steering Committee.

The Steering Committee invited members of the community to participate. Fifty stakeholders committed to the two-part Future Search Conference process, a Vision Conference and an Action Conference. At the Vision Conference in early June, social, political, economic, environmental and technological trends important to Clayton's future were studied. This visioning process resulted in a draft vision statement and twelve key performance areas. Via an interactive citizen engagement website called ClaytonConnects, the entire community was able to engage in a dynamic online conversation and share their perspectives, ideas, visions and aspirations for Clayton's future.

Open houses in August offered additional opportunities for stakeholders to provide input and comments. The feedback obtained from ClaytonConnects and the open houses became part of the dialogue for the conference participants as they structured long and short term action plans.

"We are grateful for the amazing response from the community," said Mayor Linda Goldstein. "We hope everyone will view the final Strategic Plan document to see how their input helped shape Clayton's future."

The fifty stakeholders reconvened at the Action Conference in September. They reviewed and refined the draft Vision Statement and reduced the number of Key Performance Areas from twelve to four.

In late October, the Steering Committee reviewed the final four KPAs and discussed the process of selecting individuals to serve on Action Committees. The Action Committees are responsible for executing each of the KPAs which is the culmination of the process.

"C the Future provided all Clayton stakeholders the unique opportunity to engage in the creation of their desired future," said The Novak Consulting Group President Julia Novak. "The result of this inclusive process is truly a community vision for Clayton, and it is something that should be celebrated as the city enters into its next 100 years."

I hope you had the opportunity to participate in our Strategic Planning process and to help shape our community's future. During the Strategic Planning process, we worked to engage the entire community and, with thoughtful citizen input, we ended up with an amazing long range plan. It took the commitment of fifty conference participants almost a year to draft. During the conferences in June and September, our community was put under the proverbial microscope. We discussed Clayton's strengths and weaknesses (yes, there are a few). When we decided on Key Performance Areas, we engaged the public via ClaytonConnects, the city's new citizen engagement website, to contribute ideas, comments and aspirations for Clayton and its future. The information gathered from this dynamic process became part of the dialogue for establishing Clayton's long range strategy.

As we plan for our future, we are also looking back on our 100 year history. Clayton celebrates the 100th anniversary of its incorporation in 2013. So...Happy Anniversary, everyone! We commemorate our centennial with a new history book, Clayton, Missouri: An Urban Story and a year-long calendar of events. I'm sure the folks who worked to incorporate the City of Clayton back in 1913, could not have fathomed that the 104 acres donated by Ralph Clayton and Martin Hanley would become a powerful business center with regional recognition.

Throughout its history, Clayton has maintained its prestige and elegance. I credit this to the residents who have dedicated so much of their time to serve as members of the city's various committees and commissions, as elected officials, or who have in some other way volunteered their skills and expertise. I truly believe that this city has been able to maintain its greatness through the sincere and deep concern these individuals have for their community.

I have good reason to think that Clayton's future is also in good hands. The energetic young individuals who serve on the Mayor's Youth Advisory Council (MYAC) are sincerely interested in public service. The MYAC, a collaboration between the city and the school district, is comprised of high school juniors and seniors who were selected to serve the community during the school year. In October, they held a Watch Party for the U.S. Senate debate at Clayton High School (CHS). Twenty 9th through 12th grade students gathered in the CHS library to watch the debate on the big screen. In early spring, MYAC members plan to hold a candidate forum and are developing plans for a time capsule to commemorate the centennial.

This year, we look back and ahead. We look back at an impressive history, and ahead with the confidence that Clayton will continue its status as a premier community and one of the best places to live and work in the region, state and country.

As we begin the year 2013, we have much to celebrate! Clayton has been a thriving community for 100 years. We can all be proud of how our residents, businesses and community leaders worked together create the place that we call home. Promoting business growth while protecting our beautiful neighborhoods, investing in our schools while supporting high quality city services, treasuring our parks while promoting our recreational facilities...all of these strategic efforts have created an exceptional quality of life and strong property values.

Much of our success can be attributed to our ability to embrace change while we cherish our traditions. Clayton boasts some of the most beautiful modern new buildings in the region as well as a pre-Civil War home. Looking forward, we must continue to find innovative ways to preserve and improve Clayton's margin of excellence. This is one of the reasons why community leaders involved our citizenry in a strategic planning process called C the Future. Throughout public engagement it was clear that to build the future we want for Clayton, we need to identify opportunities for partnerships.

Clayton is not new to partnering, having long participated in initiatives such as the municipal central emergency response system and the Center of Clayton, a facility that the city and school district support together. Recently, the city collaborated to form the first public-private partnership in its history. This new organization, the Clayton Century Foundation, is making significant capital investments in our city, for enhancements that ensure the margin of excellence for our community and the region, for the next 100 years.

You may be wondering what your personal role might be in positioning Clayton well for the future? Engage in your community! Volunteer in your neighborhood or with some of the many annual events that call Clayton home, like the St. Louis Art Fair. Experience all that Clayton has to offer by living local and shopping local, supporting our businesses and our city simultaneously. You can celebrate and participate in our centennial! Check out the event schedule at: www.clayton2013.com Lastly, come and see us for Sundays at Starbucks - the first Sunday of each month at the Wydown Starbucks at 4 p.m.

City Passes Budget and Three Year Plan to Reduce Budget Deficit

The city started the recession with strong reserves, but continues to face challenges due to the effects of the protracted recession. Since 2010, expenditures have exceeded revenues. During various forums held to review and discuss the new budget, policy makers and community stakeholders encouraged using the city's significant reserves in the short-term so as not to reduce service levels.

With a newly approved three year plan for deficit reduction in place, the city will strive to maintain the majority of services at or near the current levels and eliminate the General Fund structural deficit through a combination of increased efficiencies, strategic expense reduction in some service areas, and increased revenue. This approach will help preserve the fund balance for future opportunities or unforeseen financial challenges, maintain the city's quality of life and the city's position for economic growth.

Personnel

Results of the annual citizen satisfaction survey indicate that citizens are satisfied with service delivery and believe they receive good value for their tax dollars.

Nevertheless, city management conducts careful reviews of personnel expenditures. Before hiring to file a vacant position, management evaluates whether elimination, consolidation or reclassification of the position is possible. Over the past five years, the city has reduced five full-time positions, many at the administrative support and management level. Reduction in these areas limits the impact on front-line service delivery to citizens.

Service efficiencies and the recently implemented Deferred Retirement Option Plan will accelerate cost savings when a number of positions are consolidated or eliminated during the next year through retirements. Further analysis will determine if reduction in staffing levels will be implemented later in the deficit reduction plan.

Pension and Health Insurance

One of the largest increases in expenses has been contributions the city makes to respond to the loss in value of the employee pension funds. In an effort to keep the funds healthy and to prepare for retirement commitments, contributions by non-uniformed employees were reinstated over the last two years and employees are now making 3% contributions. Uniformed employees have contributed 5% for several years.

Health insurance has also increased by almost $500,000 over the past five years. To aid in controlling insurance costs, the city helped form a self-insurance pool with several other municipalities. Additionally, benefit levels and co-pays are monitored and adjusted to limit premium increases which are ultimately shared with employees.

Infrastructure and Capital Improvements

Besides helping to reduce the impact of rising personnel costs, city employees work to generate funds for capital improvement projects. But even with staff's impressive record for grant funding awards and generous corporate donations, funds are not available for several major residential street resurfacing projects in some of the largest neighborhoods. Project funds are planned to be generated by a 20 year general obligation bond program supported by a property tax levy. These funds will be used to finance five significant residential street resurfacing projects that total $15 million, making it possible to overhaul 56% of the city-maintained streets between 2014 and 2016.

Three Year Deficit Elimination Plan

Residents responding to the 2012 citizen satisfaction survey indicate that they would prefer raising taxes to reducing services. Property, sales and utility taxes will be unchanged in FY2013 per the three year deficit elimination plan. However in FY2014, the plan proposes a ½ cent increase in sales tax. To fund the needed residential street improvements, voters will be asked to approve a property tax supported bond issue which will increase residential and commercial property tax rates by approximately 12 cents per $100 of assessed value. Currently, the city's portion of the tax bills for residential and commercial property owners is approximately 10%.

Reinforced by input from the community, increased efficiencies and taxes, and through careful monitoring, the city works to execute the three year plan to eliminate the budget deficit. To view the approved FY2013 Operating and Capital Improvements Budget go to www.claytonmo.gov/budget.

Elleard Heffern Fine Jewelers Celebrates Centennial

On March 19, 2013, Elleard Heffern Fine Jewelers will commemorate 100 years in business. Christopher "Kit" Heffern's grandfather Samuel Heffern and Great Uncle George Neuhoff, Jr. founded the Heffern-Neuhoff Jewelers in March 1913, located in downtown St. Louis. The firm became known for high quality jewelry and superior design and service.

Elleard Heffern, Kit's father, continued serving St. Louisans with the highest quality jewelry and service. Elleard studied at the Gemological Institute of America "GIA" and became the first graduate gemologist in St. Louis and a founding member of American Gem Society. Elleard moved the business to Clayton in 1972. Elleard, and later Kit, were assisted by many outstanding individuals, including designer Adie Giessow, winner of two International Diamond DeBeers awards, and Keith Shaw, a 40 year employee and Clayton resident who formed life-long friendships with his clients before retiring in 2004.

Kit assumed the presidency in the early 1980s. Elleard Heffern Fine Jewelry moved to the lobby of 101 S. Hanley in 1990, and continues the tradition of offering distinctive designs and cutting edge style by international designers. Heffern is known as St. Louis' foremost authority on estate jewelry with a highly educated staff that includes three certified jewelry appraisers (AGS) and an accredited gem lab (AGS). Kit is committed to his family's tradition of providing the best possible quality, craftsmanship, and service to his clients.

Accreditation for Parks & Recreation Department

Over the last two years, the city's Parks & Recreation Department has been working through the process of becoming an accredited agency with the Commission for Accreditation of Parks and Recreation Agencies (CAPRA). The process is a significant undertaking. To become accredited, the department had to demonstrate its commitment to the field by complying with a body of standards deemed essential to the quality of services delivered and professionalism of its operational system, as well as best management practices in daily operations. Clayton's Parks & Recreation Department met the required standards and was honored at the National Recreation and Parks Association Congress held in Anaheim, California in October.

Clayton becomes the fourth agency in Missouri to receive this distinction, the second in the St. Louis metropolitan area, and one of 109 accredited agencies across the United States.

Friends of the Parks

Clayton's Parks and Recreation Department is participating in the statewide Friends of the Parks initiative, which is designed to educate citizens about the economic, environmental, health and educational benefits of parks and recreation. This informational program is intended to nurture citizen advocacy for parks and recreation programs, services and initiatives at the local, state and national level by sharing meaningful facts and information about these important issues.

The city is grateful to citizens who have expressed interest in the program. Each Friends of the Parks participant will receive a Friends of the Parks window decal, discounts and passes to facilities and activities, e-news about Clayton Parks events and activities, first notice about important legislation or local government decisions that may affect parks and recreation opportunities and tips on how to make a difference.

The program is completely free. No financial support will be required. Friends of the Parks program participants will only be asked to provide their contact information to receive occasional important announcements, and of course, those special thank you coupons and invitations.

Join the Friends of the Parks today and learn about the benefits Parks and Recreation provides by visiting www.claytonmo.gov/friends

Public Works Update

Two federally-funded (80%) projects are scheduled for construction in 2013. The first is the Traffic Signal Improvement Project, which will start during the winter and includes new vehicle detection and signal timing to improve traffic flow and minimize congestion. The 2012 Citizen Survey results indicated that the flow of traffic and congestion management was one of the top three services that residents thought should receive the most increase in emphasis. Starting in spring 2013, the other federally funded project, the Pedestrian Enhancement Project, will expand the Downtown Streetscape along Bonhomme Avenue, S. Central Avenue, and S. Meramec Avenue. It will also improve pedestrian accessibility at the northeast corner of Shaw Park Drive and Brentwood Boulevard.

Smaller, locally-funded projects include the painting of traffic signal posts, replacement of sidewalk slabs, cracksealing roads and alleys and plumbing repairs to the 8011 Bonhomme Parking Garage. The Engineering Division is also busy designing multiple projects to be constructed in 2014 and beyond. Grants have been secured, and design is underway for the resurfacing of Wydown Boulevard and the expansion of Downtown Streetscape along Brentwood Boulevard and Carondelet Avenue. Both of these projects are scheduled for 2014 construction. In addition, several large residential resurfacing projects are scheduled for 2014 and 2015.
