As we write this in late May, spring has finally sprung in our fair city! We want to thank our voters for passage at our April election of two ballot proposals. The bond issue for streets will allow us to repave neighborhood streets and replace curbs and lighting to bring them up to the standards Clayton residents expect and enjoy. The sales tax for our first responders will ensure that you will continue to receive the top flight emergency services our city is known for. We are grateful for the confidence you have placed in us to use these funds wisely and in your best interests. Thank you.

Warmer weather also means it's time for the Farmers' Market and for Musical Nights in Oak Knoll Park. The Market has been totally revamped and improved. It's moved to North Central Avenue and will take place every Thursday evening from 4:30 until 7:30 through October. We have new and returning vendors, music and activities for the entire family. The market will continue to expand and improve throughout the season so come on by and make an evening of it: you can do your food shopping for the weekend, then stop in to see our wonderful "mortar and bricks" retailers and have a glass of wine and a relaxed bite to eat at one of our fine restaurants. You will be glad you did!

Musical Nights has become a treasured summer tradition. The city thanks the Clayton Century Foundation for its help in making Musical Nights the enduring success that it is. Concerts are on the fourth Sunday of each month through September, with the first on June 22 featuring the Hulapoppers, a fun band whose music list spans the decades from the 60s through the 90s. So gather the whole family for a night of live music under the trees in our beautiful Oak Knoll Park. Bring your blanket, chairs, and a picnic dinner and enjoy a fun evening with family, friends, and neighbors.

Lastly, summer is always at its most beautiful on Wydown Boulevard. The road may have been bumpy (hopefully, repairs are underway as you read this!), but the flowering trees, bushes and perennials can't be beat. Thank you to our Public Works Department for the work they do each year to bring us this lovely streetscape.

Enjoy all of the warm weather activities in Clayton and we'll see you at the Farmers' Market, Musical Nights, the Shaw Park Pool, and strolling or cycling on Wydown!

April 8 Election

Ward I Alderman
Richard Lintz

During the April election, voters selected Richard Lintz to replace Andrea Maddox-Dallas as Ward I Alderman. Mr. Lintz will share the responsibilities as representative for the citizens of Ward I with Alderman Joanne Boulton.

Also sworn in with Alderman Lintz during the April 29 Board of Alderman meeting and elected to her third term as Ward II Alderman - Cynthia Garnholz, and elected to his second term as Ward III Alderman - Mark Winings.

Two of the four proposals voters were asked to consider passed.

Clayton Appoints New Public Works Director

Public Works Director Dale Houdeshell

Clayton's City Manager Craig Owens announced the appointment of Dale L. Houdeshell as the city's new Director of Public Works effective February 3, 2014.

"I am very excited to be coming to work for the City of Clayton. It is a beautiful, well managed city, and I am looking forward to joining the city's leadership team," said Mr. Houdeshell.

Before coming to Clayton, Mr. Houdeshell served as Director of Public Works for the City of Manhattan, Kansas; for six years, he led and managed the city's Engineering, Water and Wastewater, and Streets and Fleet Divisions. From 2005 to 2007, as Manager of Special Projects for the City of Chesterfield, Missouri, he developed and managed contracts for a $25 million Parks Bond Issue, collaborated with Monarch Chesterfield Levee District on the design and installation of water and sewer lines, and collaborated with St. Louis County and MoDOT on various other projects. He served as Manager of Public Works Services and City Engineer for the City of St. Peters, Missouri from 1987 to 2005.

Mr. Houdeshell received his Bachelor of Science in Civil Engineering from the University of Missouri at Rolla, now MS&T. He is registered as a Professional Engineer (P.E.) in Missouri and Kansas.

"Clayton is a unique city committed to top amenities and service. Mr. Houdeshell brings a level of talent, knowledge and experience to our team that will continue our high standards and move us into the future," said City Manager Owens. "He is a welcome addition to our team."

Mr. Houdeshell was selected to fill the Director of Public Works position following a thorough and competitive search of talented applicants from throughout the mid-west. He will succeed former Director of Public Works Michael Pratt.

Streets by Clayton's Civil Engineer Steve Meyer www.claytonmo.gov/projects

Like many things we encounter in our own lives, the life of a road is cyclical. From the time a new road is constructed, it begins its decline. One of the tasks of Clayton's Public Works Department is the stewardship of our roads, maintaining them at a satisfactory level while efficiently managing the funding available. Clayton does this through its Pavement Management Program, the full text of which is posted at www.claytonmo.gov/projects. The Public Works Department has presented annual updates to this plan to the Board of Aldermen each of the past three years, most recently at the May 27 Board meeting.

Many cities and counties simply pave a street then forget about it for twenty years. While this approach may be easier, the pavement spends most of its life in less-than-satisfactory condition, and repair costs are increased in the long run. For instance, Hanley Road was resurfaced in 1998, and the County plans to resurface in 2015. Believe it or not, Hanley Road is actually "younger" than most city-maintained streets. Considering pavement management on a life-cycle cost basis, Clayton reduces overall cost while maintaining the pavement at higher levels during its life.

Approximately half of the City's streets are cracksealed each year (even years - east of Hanley, odd years - west of Hanley), which keeps water out of cracks in the pavement. The City's streets are generally microsurfaced seven and fourteen years after paving which further seals the pavement and prevents degradation. Finally, after twenty years, it is time for the asphalt to be removed and replaced.

Following voter approval of bond issuance in 1993, the City undertook major resurfacing projects from 1994 to 1998. Twenty years later, and thanks to voter approval in April, we are planning to resurface again, as planned. The first street to see significant repairs will be our beloved Wydown Boulevard. Knowing that Wydown would decline in the coming years, the City applied for and received a federally-funded grant (80% of the project cost) in 2011. Later this year, Claverach Park will be resurfaced and alleys will be replaced in Clayton Gardens, Davis Place, and Hi-Pointe. These will be the first projects funded by the new general obligation bond. But this is just the beginning. More resurfacing, alley replacement, and lighting replacement projects are planned for the next few years. See details at www.claytonmo.gov/projects

Kevin Murphy Promoted to Chief of Police

Effective March 14, 2014, former Assistant Chief Kevin R. Murphy was promoted to Chief of the Clayton Police Department.

"I am both humbled and gratified to accept the opportunity to lead the Clayton Police Department as its next Chief," said Chief Murphy. "I look to the future with great pride and anticipation, knowing the men and women of this department are among the finest law enforcement officers anywhere."

During his 36 years with the Clayton Police Department, Chief Murphy has demonstrated a commitment to the Clayton community. He has been instrumental in the department consistently achieving the CALEA (Commission on Accreditation for Law Enforcement Agencies) accreditation; one of only eight agencies in Missouri and 131 nationally that qualify for CALEA's Certificate of Advanced Accreditation. Chief Murphy is a graduate of the 207th Session of the FBI National Academy and currently serves on the FBI National Academy Associates and Options for Justice Board.

Chief Murphy received his Master of Arts: Management from Webster University, Master of Science: Criminal Justice Administration from the University of Central Missouri and Bachelors of Science: Administration of Justice from the University of Missouri – St. Louis.

"Our own Kevin Murphy distinguished himself in a very competitive national field," said City Manager Owens.

"He is a strong leader who will lead a very strong department to continue a tradition of excellent service to the Clayton community and the region."

Chief Murphy was promoted following a thorough and competitive national search of applicants. He succeeds former Chief of Police Thomas Byrne who retired in December 2013.

Police Chief Kevin R. Murphy

► Commitment to Safety

Safety is Clayton's main priority and a source of community pride. The Clayton Police Department distinguishes itself through its exceptional crime statistics and conscientious, highly trained and educated staff.

The department received the annual Outstanding Law Enforcement Agency award for the St. Louis metropolitan area and surrounding counties, and is one of only eight in Missouri and 131 nationally that qualify for the CALEA (Commission on Accreditation for Law Enforcement Agencies) Certificate of Advanced Accreditation.

Crime statistic website, CityRating.com, indicates that Violent Crime in Clayton is 79.84% less than the national average and property crime is 37.88% below the average. Clayton's violent crime rate is 82.12% below the state average and property crime is 45.39% below the average.

This data is reinforced by the citizens of Clayton. According to responses to the city's annual citizen satisfaction survey, 95% are very satisfied/satisfied with Clayton's public safety services compared to an average rating of 80% for peer cities in Missouri and throughout the U.S. Comparing how safe responders feel downtown: Clayton's rate is 90%, peer cities in Missouri received 71%, and the national rate is 69%.

Safety is one of Clayton's most admired and emulated public amenities. Clayton police use tried and true methods to keep the community safe. Marked and unmarked cars, uniformed and plain clothes officers patrol residential neighborhoods and business districts. Officers on bicycles patrol neighborhoods, monitor subdivision parades and picnics, and patrol the city's special events.

The department's leadership in new and innovative equipment and programs inspires crime prevention trends throughout the region.

"Clayton residents can help keep our neighborhoods safe," said Chief Kevin Murphy. "We encourage them to call 911, if they notice any suspicious activity. To report non-emergencies, they should call the Clayton Police Department at 314.645.3000."

See details about the Citizens Police Academy and the annual National Night Out on Page 7.

Business Highlight

Crescent Coast

Inspired by fond memories of beachside vacations and determined to create a fun, one-stop shop for customers of all ages, Terry Warner opened Crescent Coast at 169 Carondelet Plaza in Clayton.

This mother of two boys created a space that offers items for the whole family. The boutique is stocked to the brim with fun-in-the-sun selections for men, women and teens, and features an affordable combination of beachy-cool and practical gear from more than 30 popular brands, and several lines exclusive to St. Louis.

"There's something for everyone here," says Warner. "The beach lifestyle isn't limited to any particular time of life. It's a state of mind."

Warner has created a fun and colorful oasis for shoppers to both peruse the wide variety of merchandise and relax in the comfort of a faux beachfront hideaway. Accents of driftwood and raw metal stand out against the pale-blue walls lined with surf-friendly gear, shoes, and illuminated cubbies that hold a selection of specialty apparel and basics. The fitting room area comes complete with a lounge and big-screen TVs – a perfect spot for a little mid-shopping break.

"I have to thank my friend and co-owner of Lusso Melissa Nieberle and my landlord Josh Corson, who genuinely cares about his tenants and the City of Clayton, for encouraging me to locate my boutique in Clayton – we LOVE it here!

Parks & Recreation Update

Get to Know Clayton's Biking and Walking Trails

The City of Clayton is committed to building a trail system that meets the diverse needs of modern commuters and exercise enthusiasts. Trails in Shaw Park and Oak Knoll Park have been updated, adding to the length, ease of access and interconnectivity, while remaining minimally invasive to the parks. In Shaw Park, the paths now integrate natural areas with amenities like new public art and a work out area. The Oak Knoll Park trail now winds through the fourteen acre stand of mature trees and past the iconic pond and fountain.

"Our citizens told us in the recent citizen satisfaction survey that the trails are important," said Parks and Recreation Director Patty DeForrest. "It is our goal to continue to improve and expand our existing trail system."

To facilitate connection to city parks and trails, a number of community projects have been completed. Wydown Boulevard, designated as one of the Top 10 Great Streets in 2010 by the American Planning Association, has bike lanes, sidewalks, and a jogging trail in the center median for safe, leisurely strolls and recreational travel from Forest Park to Downtown Clayton.

Downtown Clayton, being the center of a bustling business community, teems with vehicular and pedestrian traffic. In 2013, the city adopted C the Future, a long range strategic plan that recommends making the busy streets more pedestrian friendly. This process has become part of the city's Complete Streets program which focuses on a transportation system that supports safe use of the roadway for everyone. A prime example of a complete street is The Crescent section of Carondelet Plaza near the Ritz-Carlton where automobiles and bicycles comfortably share the roadway while pedestrians are given ample room to walk.

West of downtown, Shaw Park connects with the new Centennial Greenway, a part of the regional Great River's Greenway trail system that continues north to Olive Boulevard. Cyclists and walkers can also travel through the south end of Shaw Park and into the Clayshire neighborhood for safer access to retail along Clayton Road and Brentwood Boulevard.

With major improvements completed and more on the way, Clayton residents are encouraged to explore their beautiful community. For more information about C the Future proposals, visit www.claytonmo.gov/cthefuture. Find a printer-friendly pedestrian map of Clayton's parks at www.claytonmo.gov/maps
